

If This House Could Talk
Sign Pick Up THIS SATURDAY

Every home in Reading has a story. Share yours with your neighbors this spring as part of the Reading 375 celebration. From May 31 – June 15, Reading residents and business owners will post custom signs in front of their homes and businesses sharing just one small interesting fact about what makes their home or business building special. The fact could be historical, architectural, public, or about the people who live or have lived there.

Who lived in your home before you? What year was it built? Has it been renovated? Why? Is there something unique about the architecture? Is there a legend of a ghost? Is there something unique about your yard? The only limit is your imagination.

Pick up your custom “If This House Could Talk” sign THIS SATURDAY, April 13, from 9 – noon at RCTV Studios on Main Street. Signs will be available, as well as the materials to add your own personal story, and also volunteers who can answer any questions you might have. Light refreshments will be served. You do NOT have to register for this event – just stop by any time during the morning to register to participate and pick up your sign.

Every home has a story. Share yours this spring as part of the Reading 375 anniversary celebrations.

About Reading 375: Reading 375 is a non-profit, volunteer driven organization whose goal is to bring our community together to celebrate Reading’s 375th anniversary in 2019. Events will occur over a two-week period, from May 31 – June 15, and will include local artists and musicians, architecture unique to Reading, and fun community gatherings. The Reading 375 Steering Committee hopes to create a town-wide celebration of Reading’s rich history and exciting future. Commemorative anniversary t-shirts are available at Reading Trophy and Shirt and RCTV Studios. Limited edition Reading375 pins are available at Whitelam Books, Reading Cooperative Bank, The Town Clerk’s Office at Town Hall, and RCTV Studios for $3.75.
